Bio: So a short about me. I was born and raised in so cal and attended UCLA, graduating in June 2012 with my BA in Geography. When I got into UCLA I attempted to follow my parent's plans/dreams and not my own which had my pursuing a medical degree (while majoring in geography). In my senior year I realized I hated it and decided to move on.

After graduation, I got a job in the tech industry with an Internet Video company doing Advertising Operations. Within a year I rose to the Director of Advertising Operations, but most of my focus was on the product development and management side. I have moved on to another company now doing Advertising Operations and Product Management/Development.

Growing up I taught myself HTML and CSS and did the freelance thing for a while. In the past year I taught myself JavaScript and working on PHP. I've noticed that I definitely gravitate towards web technologies and programming, but I am interested in learning everything and furthering my career in this field!
